INDEPENDENT INVESTIGATIVE REPORT

Epstein, COVID & the CIA

By Destiny Rezendes

July 20, 2026

There were many integral events that transpired in the last months of 2019. There are three in particular that, although seemingly unrelated, would build upon each other to define an entire era of corruption. Two of those events were in December; the third occurred on October 18, 2019 — just three and a half months before America's first confirmed COVID-19 case — when fifteen influential people quietly met in New York City.

The occasion? Event 201, hosted by the Johns Hopkins Center for Health Security, the World Economic Forum, and the Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation. The purpose of the event was to conduct a high-level tabletop exercise (TTX). They rehearsed a fictional pandemic of a coronavirus jumping from animals to humans. The projection they calmly discussed: 65 million dead in eighteen months.

They then discussed something stranger — how governments should control the media narrative once the pandemic hit. It's important to briefly note that the exercise itself had only fifteen participants, but it drew a consistently packed audience — an elite crowd in its own right. Of the fifteen players, there are two who are remarkably worth a spotlight all of their own:

- Avril Haines — former Deputy Director of the CIA under Obama — the official who refused to punish her own agency personnel after the CIA was caught illegally spying on Senate Intelligence Committee computers in 2014. Within two years, she'd be confirmed as Director of National Intelligence. Avril Haines is the first and only woman to serve as both Deputy Director of the CIA and Director of National Intelligence. Her husband also works for the CIA, and she is a Johns Hopkins dropout.
- Chris Elias — a director of the Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation.

Fourteen weeks later, the real thing arrived — a global coronavirus pandemic — and the companies, institutions, financing structures, and intelligence networks activated with a precision that demands answers. This is the story of the answers no one discusses, and of all the people who profited from them.

A Biodefense Chameleon Wearing a Fresh Coat of Paint

In 2020, industry headlines celebrated National Resilience, Inc. — a bold, new American biotech "start-up," backed by ARCH Venture Partners, 8VC, CPP Investments, NEA, and Harvard-connected leadership. Reporters marveled that it had appeared "almost from thin air."

But it hadn't. It had simply been rebranded.

The corporate DNA and the "start-up" narrative quickly dissolve once traced back to its inception:

- 1999 — Founded as Nanocoat Technologies in Alachua, Florida.
- 2002 — Became Nanotherapeutics, Inc., quietly amassing government contracts in one critical niche: biological weapons countermeasures.
- 2013 — The U.S. Army funded the creation of a Biosafety Level 3 (BSL-3) lab facility in Alachua to handle dangerous pathogens and produce military-grade countermeasures.
- 2017 — Rebranded again as Ology Bioservices.
- 2021 — Its assets, contracts, and the Army BSL-3 lab were absorbed into Resilience Government Services, Inc., then National Resilience, Inc. / Resilience.

The "start-up" was in fact the only privately operated, DoD-dedicated BSL-3 Advanced Development and Manufacturing facility in the entire country, carrying two decades of classified biodefense history and hundreds of millions in existing government contracts. Resilience's future partner, Moderna, got the same brilliant-newcomer treatment. Founded in 2010 as a Harvard spinout from Flagship Pioneering, it had never produced a single FDA-approved product by 2020. But DARPA had been funding it for years:

- 2013 — DARPA awards Moderna $24.6 million under ADEPT: PROTECT to build mRNA therapeutics against unknown and engineered pathogens.
- 2017 — The Pandemic Prevention Platform (DARPA) also worked with Nanotherapeutics — Resilience's predecessor.
- October 2020 — DARPA adds $56 million under its NOW program — an award Moderna's own release says "builds on a previous assistance grant with DARPA established in 2013."

When Operation Warp Speed handed Moderna $1.525 billion in July 2020, it wasn't betting on a promising newcomer. It was activating a military technology investment that had already been running for seven years.

Moderna had never approved a single drug. DARPA had funded its platform for seven years. These are not contradictions — they are effectively the same sentence.

One of the other critical 2019 events was on December 20th, 2019, when — just before COVID — the U.S. International Development Finance Corporation (DFC) was created.

Trump's 2019 BUILD Act transformed its predecessor, OPIC [Overseas Private Investment Corporation] & merged it with USAID to form the DFC in late December 2019 - a $60 billion weapon aimed at countering Chinese infrastructure abroad. The agency was originally designed to finance foreign investment. That all changed once the CARES Act, Executive Order 13922, and Defense Production Act authorities converged and turned it into a powerful domestic emergency lender.

Only three companies got DFC pandemic C19 response loans:

Company	Loan	Outcome
Eastman Kodak	$765M	Collapsed in scandal
ApiJect Systems	$590M	Commitment may never have formally closed
Resilience	$410M	The only one disbursed in full

That $410 million loan closed on March 23, 2023 — as Resilience's valuation exploded from $900 million to multi-billion in under eighteen months, and all without a single novel product on the market. Senator Elizabeth Warren's March 2025 letter to John Phelan — then the Navy Secretary nominee awaiting confirmation who was a Florida businessman with zero military history— flagged his stake in Resilience & its "$410 million DoD loan. Phelan was confirmed anyway.

The Men Who Signed the Check on the DFC $410M Loan:

- Scott Nathan — DFC CEO (Biden appointee, former Trilateral Commission).
- Rahul Singhvi — Resilience CEO, formerly of Flagship Pioneering — the same firm that created Moderna- to which Resilience would make mRNA product for during Covid.
- Scott Gottlieb — former FDA Commissioner who joined Pfizer's board 85 days after leaving the FDA, then personally led NEA's seed investment in Resilience, as well as sitting on its board.
- Chris Darby — sitting CEO of In-Q-Tel, the CIA's venture capital arm. Darby also sat on Resilience's board.

While Moderna made the vaccine with Resilience, Palantir Technologies was watching everything. Under Operation Warp Speed, HHS paid Palantir $16 million to build a program called Tiberius — the national vaccine distribution and tracking platform. Every dose allocated, every vial shipped, every record: Palantir saw it all.

The contract climbed to $31 million, then $63 million, plus an additional $5.3 million from the CDC for therapeutic tracking. The U.S. Army — which funded the BSL-3 lab that is run by Resilience, and then later mandated vaccines for all service members — was Palantir's single largest government customer: $730 million since 2008 per USASpending.gov, part of $1.9 billion in verified federal contracts, with an unknown classified supplement.

The Army built the lab. Palantir tracked the doses. And the soldiers who built the BSL-3 Laboratory later had no choice but to take the vaccines made inside it.

In September 2013 — five years after Jeffrey Epstein's guilty plea for soliciting a minor, and two years into his documented post-conviction relationship with Bill Gates — Gates launched a new initiative: the Global Health Investment Fund (GHIF). Structured by JPMorgan Chase and the Gates Foundation, it was a $94 million vehicle to finance late-stage vaccines, diagnostics, and drugs. Gates was the anchor of the initiative. JPMorgan ran the books.

Just to be clear — in 2013 alone:

- Bill Gates starts the Epstein-influenced GHIF to fund global health and vaccines, which now funds Resilience.
- DARPA awards Moderna $24.6 million under ADEPT: PROTECT to build mRNA therapeutics against unknown and engineered pathogens. That same DARPA program also later funded research for Resilience (called Ology Bioservices at the time); [[in fact, DARPA used the Army-built BSL-3 to manufacture mAb114, later used alongside Remdesivir during the November 2018 Ebola trials.]]
- The U.S. Army pays to build a BSL-3 laboratory in Alachua, FL, for which Resilience would be the sole operator for the government, and which — when 2021 came around — made the mRNA product for Moderna.

PHILANTHROPATHS AND PREDATORS

Epstein Wasn't Just a Predator. He Was Infrastructure.

An FBI Los Angeles field office memo (October 2020), released in the Epstein disclosures, states a source believed Epstein "became a co-opted Mossad agent" and had "undergone training as a spy for Israel's intelligence agency." And Epstein's obsession with human biology — funding transhumanist research at Harvard, financing ties to Moderna's academic ecosystem — traces an unbroken thread from his intelligence activities straight into the biotech world that produced the vaccines.

A man who trafficked children. Ran a blackmail operation. Funded biology research. Introduced the CIA Director to the surveillance state's most powerful private builder. His files are still not fully released.

Epstein's emails, released under the Epstein Files Transparency Act, document him as Gates' bridge to major donors for Global Health — and some of the emails show Epstein attempting to leverage knowledge of Gates' private life to force continued engagement.

Under oath before the House Oversight Committee on June 10, 2026, Gates confirmed Epstein "attempted to manipulate me by leveraging information about my indiscretions to coerce me into re-engaging with him," and admitted meeting Epstein more than six times after the 2008 conviction. Shortly after Epstein's death, the GHIF — the initiative Gates cited as his reason for maintaining a multi-year, post-conviction relationship with the convicted pedophile — went on to invest in National Resilience. The fund born of Gates' Epstein-era philanthropy fed capital into a CIA-adjacent, Army-seeded biodefense manufacturer that became the primary partner for the government's most-funded COVID-19 "vaccine."

For more important context: on Resilience's board sat Susan Desmond-Hellmann, the former CEO of the Gates Foundation (2014–2020), who ran its vaccine portfolio and left in early 2020 to join Resilience's board that very same year. Susan began working with the Gates Foundation the year after Bill Gates announced the Epstein-inspired GHIF.

Even long before the pandemic, back in the mid-2010's Epstein was cultivating the environment leading up to the outbreak. Within the EFTA files that were released Epstein is seen arranging social meet-ups between former Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation executive & Epstein's close friend, Boris Nikolic & a man named Nathan Wolfe.

Wolfe was a DARPA/WEF poster child & "virus hunter" who founded the company Metabiota, a pandemic insurance company that had botched much of the Ebola response in 2014 – a company that in IRS filings for In-Q-tel as late as 2019 showed that they were in IQT's top five largest donations for that fiscal year.

Nathan Wolfe also advised & worked with EcoHealth Alliance the company responsible for facilitating the Gain of Function research in Wuhan that likely led to the entire pandemic. EcoHealth Alliance and Metabiota had been formal partners since 2014 under the USAID PREDICT program, a "virus hunting" initiative to track and predict emerging zoonotic disease threats. They have co-authored research, shared funding streams, and collaborated with the Wuhan Institute of Virology on bat coronavirus studies. A fact notably stated multiple times in past interviews with our now HHS Secretary RFK jr. a common understanding to most is that USAID was merely a cut-out & funding vehicle for CIA operations.

As it turns out not only was Wolfe good friends with Ghislaine Maxwell, but in his widely acclaimed book published in 2011 "The Viral Storm" in the acknowledgments, he thanks a list of individuals, including Jeffrey Epstein and Boris Nikolic.

The Gates Foundation CEO, Susan Hellman left in 2020. She then joined Resilience's board. Resilience got GHIF money. GHIF was Gates' fund. Epstein helped design it & the intricate web surrounding the pandemic that was soon to shake up the world.

The CIA Had More Than a Hand in the Game — It Had a Seat on the Board

The third critical date in late 2019 was December 5th, 2019. The Event 201 TTX was not the only pre-COVID pandemic exercise of late 2019. The CIA's venture capital arm, In-Q-Tel (IQT)/IQT Labs [B.Next], had surreptitiously gathered in Arlington, VA, to do an exercise of their own just weeks before the COVID pandemic emerged in the US. The only proof of this event exists solely in internal IQT reports — reports which were explicitly done on a not-for-attribution basis, allowing the participants and the event to go unknown and unfindable by the public.

In the depths of the many research "rabbit holes" that I had ventured down during the pandemic, I downloaded the initial paper without realizing its significance — only to rediscover it years later. The report, titled "Leveraging Digital Health Technologies During Large-Scale Epidemics," covering their simulated tabletop exercise in the context of emerging technologies to aid in pandemic response.

The writers and participants included a handful of oddly familiar names:

- Dr. Eric Toner — Johns Hopkins Center for Health Security Senior Advisor; Event 201 senior writer.
- Luciana Borio — former Director for Medical and Biodefense Preparedness under Trump; left in March 2019 to become a VP at In-Q-Tel; Johns Hopkins alumna; Council on Foreign Relations; ARCH Venture Partners.
- Tara O'Toole — In-Q-Tel VP; Johns Hopkins Center for Health Security Senior Advisor; Crimson Contagion TTX writer.

Among the other participants (26 in total) besides IQT staff (of which the most notable were, Eugene Chiu, Dylan George, Dan Hanfling, Kevin O'Connell, etc.), there were also government officials from the DHA, the U.S. Army, the CDC (3), Sandia National Laboratory, and a director for HHS/ASPR — the agency responsible for BARDA [the government agency that partnered with Gates' GHIC].

One could find all of this merely circumstantial. However, it's important to note that Borio has served the government in biodefense since the 9/11 anthrax attacks, effectively working across four different administrations. Borio also happens to be a member of the CFR and is a Venture Partner at ARCH Venture Partners, the Robert Nelsen VC firm that provided Resilience with its seed funding, alongside NEA and Joe Lonsdale's 8VC.

According to acclaimed independent journalist Whitney Webb, it was Luciana Borio herself, an IQT VP who had directly inspired Nelsen's incubation of Resilience in the first place. Nelsen, like Borio, also belongs to the CFR — a council upon whose board Jeffrey Epstein once sat.

For clarity, In-Q-Tel is the Central Intelligence Agency's venture capital arm, founded in 1999 by former CIA officials. It's well known that it was IQT that gave Palantir its earliest funding. Palantir co-founder Peter Thiel had been an early In-Q-Tel supporter. Its relationship is structural, documented, and ongoing. Chris Darby, an IQT career employee dating back to 2006, worked up the ranks to become In-Q-Tel's CEO by 2016.

Leading up to the pandemic, President Trump had nominated Lisa Porter in March 2018 to serve as Deputy Under Secretary of Defense for Research and Engineering. She served from 2018 until resigning on July 10, 2020. However, immediately before that appointment, Porter was the Executive Vice President and Director of In-Q-Tel [IQT Labs] at the CIA's venture capital arm from 2017 to 2018 only leaving that position to accept Trump's nomination of her.

By the time Porter had left the administration in mid-2020, Darby [IQT President] joined Resilience's founding board —meaning the sitting head of the CIA's investment arm simultaneously directed a company that was collecting DoD contracts, a DFC pandemic loan, NIH manufacturing contracts, and Moderna revenue. His dual role was disclosed in corporate materials, but no public conflict-of-interest review was ever released.

During that time — when Resilience was making vaccine material for Moderna's COVID-19 vaccines — Resilience's Chairman of the Board, Chris Darby, was a direct link, an arm rather, to the CIA, which at the time (2021–2025) was led by Director William Burns. The Epstein Files Transparency Act documents show emails which establish the fact that Jeffrey Epstein was the one responsible for the introduction of CIA Director William Burns to Palantir CEO and founder Peter Thiel (EFTA02593893). Burns took over the CIA in March 2021. Thiel's Palantir was already being embedded throughout the intelligence community. One of Epstein's roles, particularly his role as an intelligence-world social connector reached —as the record suggests — single handedly crafted the relationship between Peter Thiel and the very man {Burns} who would go on to run the CIA.

Per ProPublica's April 2026 analysis of Trump administration disclosures, over 100 officials now hold financial ties to Palantir — the largest single conflict-of-interest footprint of any company in the executive branch. Notable figures include:

- Jacob Helberg — Under Secretary of State; former Palantir advisor paid $840,000; designed Pax Silica; signed the Fort Foundry One MOU in Jerusalem.
- Clark Minor — CIO, HHS; ex-Palantir (13 yrs); holds $1M–$5M in stock.
- Jim O'Neill — Under Secretary of HHS and acting CDC Deputy Director.

- Justin Overbaugh — Under Secretary of Defense for Intelligence; disclosed Palantir transactions.

The company that the 100+ current officials are invested in ran Tiberius (COVID vaccine tracking), runs ImmigrationOS (enforcement targeting), and manages nuclear security data. Its CEO held Palantir's first board meeting in Tel Aviv "in solidarity" during the Gaza genocide. Founder & CEO Peter Thiel has publicly stated when asked about his software being utilized to murder Gazans:

"My bias is to defer to Israel."

Fauci, the CIA, and the Cover-Up

On February 1, 2020, Fauci convened an emergency call after a leading virologist privately warned that COVID-19's genome "look[ed] possibly engineered." FOIA-obtained notes show participants discussed the lab-origin hypothesis — then agreed not to publish it because it would add "fuel to the conspiracists." Within four days, those same scientists reversed themselves publicly in "The Proximal Origin of SARS-CoV-2," dismissing the lab leak. Several authors held NIH grants routed through Fauci's office.

Let's not forget that it was the ODNI which — during COVID — was tasked with leading the investigation into the origins. An agency that, under the Biden Administration, was run by an Event 201 participant, former CIA Deputy Director, and Johns Hopkins dropout Avril Haines. The public-facing report failed to mention many of the truths regarding COVID-19 that we now know today.

CIA whistleblower James Erdman told the Senate on May 13, 2026: "Dr. Fauci's role in the cover-up was intentional." Erdman testified Fauci inserted himself into CIA origins deliberations on February 3, 2020, and again June 4, 2021. Six of the CIA's seven technical experts believed it was a lab leak. Management changed the conclusion. Six of seven CIA analysts said lab leak. Management changed the line. The man who funded research in Wuhan helped determine Wuhan's guilt.

Apollo Global Management manages over $650 billion. Co-founder Leon Black paid Epstein [both prominent Jewish Billionaires] $158–170 million from 2012–2017, per Senate Finance Committee findings. The USVI's January 2021 subpoena demanded "all photos of his trips to Little St. James." Black settled for $62.5 million in January 2023 with immunity for "acts or events related to Epstein," and resigned as CEO in March 2021.

Now watch the handoff.

When the Epstein Files began causing Apollo some bad PR back in 2020 Black stepped down and Marc Rowan, one of AGM's co-founders stepped up to clean Apollo's image & stabilize the company. Simultaneously, he was Trump's “Covid Market” Adviser in Trump's first administration & was recently appointed by Trump to sit on the Gaza "Board of Peace" alongside Trump's Son-in-Law Jared Kushner, & our current USAID director/Sec of State Marco Rubio.

In late 2024, Benjamin Black — Leon's son, ex-Apollo — co-authored a policy essay with Joe Lonsdale (Palantir co-founder, 8VC managing partner, founding investor in Resilience) calling to rebuild the newly formed DFC into a geopolitical finance weapon against China. It reached the Trump transition team & was praised on Trump's personal social media. That Lonsdale/Black article effectively served as Black's audition to land himself a position within the administration.

In an unusual & rare event on December 11, 2025, President Trump and Vice President Vance both personally swore in Benjamin Black as DFC CEO in the Oval Office — a ceremony usually reserved for far higher cabinet posts. That same day: Pax Silica, a multilateral agreement, was announced; the NDAA raising the DFC cap from $60B to $205B passed the House; and an Israel–U.S. economic security MOU was signed. ALL ON IN THE SAME 24HR PERIOD.

This was not coincidental scheduling.

THE APOLLO CONSTELLATION

$158 Million to a Sex Trafficker — and a Son at the Controls of $205 Billion.

The DFC that loaned $410M to Resilience — a company backed by Lonsdale's 8VC — is now run by the son of the man who paid Epstein $158 million. In October 2025, Apollo and 8VC announced a formal partnership to deploy "several billion dollars" into the exact sectors as DFC's new mandate, noting their partners "co-founded companies including Palantir." The son of the man who paid Epstein now controls a $205 billion government fund. His co-author's firm backed both Palantir and Resilience. Their firms are now formally partnered.

When the Epstein scandal forced Leon Black out in March 2021, Apollo needed credibility — and hired Jay Clayton, Trump's former SEC Chairman, as Lead Independent Director. In November 2024, Trump nominated Clayton as U.S. Attorney for the Southern District of New York — the most powerful prosecutor's office in America, with jurisdiction over any Epstein-related prosecution of Leon Black. Clayton resigned from Apollo's board April 21, 2025, & became acting SDNY U.S. Attorney on April 22, 2025, kept his Apollo stock, and recused himself from Apollo matters.

Plain language: the lawyer who rehabilitated Apollo after Epstein is now the prosecutor over Epstein's jurisdiction — while holding stock in the firm co-founded by the man who paid Epstein $158 million. The House Oversight Committee's June 2026 probe has flagged Leon Black for an interview — in the very jurisdiction where the top prosecutor has recused himself.

Now, as of July 2026, the partial testimony of Leon Black has been released, and within it Black was clearly praising Jeffrey Epstein. The testimony was cut short when Black refused to answer the House Committee's questions concerning NDAs in relation to Epstein; on the spot, Black was served two subpoenas by Chairman Comer, forcing Black to return to complete his testimony and turn over all his Epstein-related finances. The initial return date for his testimony was set for July 16th, 2026, but was postponed at the last minute, and the date is now set for September 3, 2026.

This is not an oversight. This is architecture.

The chain of events:

- Late 1990s–2018: Apollo co-founder and CEO Leon Black develops a close relationship with Jeffrey Epstein, ultimately paying him $158 million over roughly five years for tax & estate-planning advice — continuing even after Epstein's 2008 conviction.
- August 2019: Epstein is indicted in federal court in Manhattan (SDNY) on sex-trafficking charges and dies in custody, ruled a suicide.
- January 2021: A Dechert LLP investigation into Black's Epstein ties leads Black to announce he'll step down as Apollo CEO; the probe found no evidence Black participated in Epstein's crimes but confirmed the massive payments.
- February 2021: Apollo hires Jay Clayton — Trump's just-departed SEC chairman (2017–2020) - as its lead independent director to strengthen governance in the wake of the Black/Epstein fallout.
- November 2024: After Trump's reelection, Clayton is floated for multiple second-term roles.
- March 2025: Trump picks Clayton as U.S. Attorney for SDNY — the very office that prosecuted Epstein. Ethics disclosures reveal Clayton plans to keep his Apollo stock, American Express holdings, and a digital-asset stake.
- April 2025: Clayton is installed as interim SDNY U.S. Attorney.
- August 2025: Federal judges make his SDNY appointment permanent after Senate Democrats block confirmation.
- June 2026: Trump nominates Clayton for Director of National Intelligence (DNI), though the hearing is later canceled so Bill Pulte can serve as acting DNI.

National Resilience — once a multibillion-dollar unicorn, recipient of over $1.8 billion in government contracts and loans, manufacturer of Moderna's COVID-19 vaccine — filed Chapter 11 on July 6, 2025, through subsidiary Alachua Government Services. Cash on hand at filing: $2.3 million. Over 800 pieces of DoD-owned equipment were left stranded inside the facility. This came after the March 2023 $410 million DFC loan to Resilience — a loan now overseen by Benjamin Black.

Then the Army's own BSL-3 lab was sold in an October 2025 bankruptcy auction to Strive Specialties, Inc. — an Arizona shell incorporated in August 2024 with $297,500 in disclosed funding, listed at a Phoenix registered-agent address shared by dozens of entities.

There is no explanation for how a $297,500 company acquired a national-security facility. No regulatory review published. Its owners remain unidentified.

The U.S. government profited on precisely one COVID vaccine maker: Moderna — holding a co-inventor stake in mRNA-1273 and collecting royalties. Flagship Pioneering, ARCH Venture Partners (also a Resilience backer), and the Gates Foundation generated billions.

The people who structured these deals were not elected. They were venture capitalists, intelligence officials, private-equity founders, and ex-regulators moving between public and private power with a fluency now treated as normal — whose financial interests, in nearly every documented case, aligned with the very policies that governed the most consequential health emergency in a century.

The Epstein Files Transparency Act was signed in 2025. The full release is still incomplete. No criminal case has arisen from Leon Black's payments. The SDNY prosecutor holds Apollo stock and has recused himself. The CIA has submitted to no independent oversight of its role in either the origins cover-up or the Epstein nexus.

THE QUESTION THEY DON'T WANT ASKED

They promised to Build Back Better. They did. But better for whom? Better for the venture capitalists who seeded the vaccines. The surveillance contractors who tracked the doses. The intelligence-connected manufacturers who made them. The private-equity founders who funded the lab. And the billionaire whose sex-trafficker confidant introduced the CIA Director to the man who built the software state now running American immigration, defense procurement, and health data.

The children Epstein trafficked are still waiting for justice. The soldiers forced to take a vaccine made in a lab their own institution built are still waiting for an accounting. And the public — told this was all about saving lives — deserves to know whose lives, and whose fortunes, were actually the priority.

So here is the question this reporting leaves on the front page: Who is really running public health, the response, the economy, and our agencies — the officials we elected, or the network of intelligence-adjacent financiers, surveillance investors, and foreign-aligned billionaires whose relationships with each other predate any pandemic?
